In search of more simple and romantic times...

Travel nostalgia from the 1930s.

INDIË

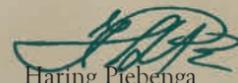

I founded AM/Authentic Models in 1968, working in one of the oldest parts of Amsterdam, a warren of narrow streets, alleys and canals. The Netherlands had lost its South-East Asian colonies decades before. But the call from that nation of innumerable tropical islands, Indonesia, whose nautical history is interwoven with the Dutch East India Company, is embedded in my genes.

I imagined sailing a 16th C. galleon around Cape Horn, past Madagascar, on to the fabled Spice Islands. Cloves and nutmeg were worth their weight in gold back in Europe. Up until that time spices were transported along the Silk Route, taking a year or more to reach Europe.

Sometimes I dropped off my Dad at the old Amsterdam airport before a trip to Batavia (now Jakarta), New York, Cape Town. We drove right onto the platform where he'd climb the stairs to a waiting Dakota DC3 or Lockheed Constellation. No direct, non-stop flights like now... Transit stations could be Budapest, Istanbul, Jodhpur, Rangoon. World travelers then were few. Hand typed lists of co-travelers were handed out before departure.

Years later, I've traveled the globe myself many times. But even now, the scents and impressions of faraway destinations still excite and fascinate.

Browse the AM Collection book... Furniture from the British Raj. Early navigation instruments. Nostalgia represented by ship models, accessories, mementos... To envision the future, know the past. From a hand-knotted monkey fist keychain to a hand-carved Rocking Horse, every product has its own story. Dreams and romance combine in our collectable artifacts, that will only increase in value over time.

Have trunk, will travel.

Transatlantic Steamers, transcontinental Wagons-Lits trains, Bentley touring cars with trunk racks installed. Grand Hotels and porters, bellboys, concierges, guards, all focused on easy travel combined with minimal hassle and full service.

Enjoy the details of our extensive reproduction trunks, from coffee table size to complete bar trunks in various sizes. French finished, leather handles and parts, brass bound.

*I love to travel,

Albert Einstein

Early 19th C. French Louis Vuitton and Goyard trunk and luggage workshops exported to the traveling upper classes of the world. Complete traveling closets were made to accommodate the elaborate dresses, suits, and uniforms of the Belle Époque.

AM introduces a collection of nostalgic but highly practical reproductions, inspired by originals from the turn of the century. The Armoire features a multitude of shelves and drawers to store and display. The rattan compartment will hold laundry and shoes. Fun, decorative, and practical.

Fun and functionality coalescing into an impressive piece of historic proportions. Wheel in the bar! Park and lock it somewhere close at hand! Made in the style of turn-of-the-century travel trunks. Solid brass hardware and bridle leather accouterments complete a hand-built, two-part bar inside a large trunk set on sturdy wheels. A multitude of drawers, serving trays, and racks for both horizontal and vertical bottles. On the left, a fold-out shelf for mixing drinks, on the right a removable game board. Party animal cum classic trunk replica. Iconic. Confidently evocative of the Belle Époque.

A challenging game of chess while enjoying a noble Petrus 1956 is less advisable when playing the bartender, the one in charge of refills. But hey, handling the ivory Staunton chess pieces dating from the 1850s and enjoying an excellent smooth vintage is a thing to be stretched, enjoyed, and noted into the annals of well being. I'm enjoying my little bar, so easy to roll, serve a drink, strike up a conversation...

Designed and built to withstand the tribulations of an Imperial Army on campaign. The officers of the British Raj and the French colonial government fully expected high tea served anywhere. That's why campaign furniture was designed and made to be indestructible. Brass bound and constructed from durable woods, an officer's furniture was made to survive while on the move.

Traveling through Provence, our picnic sojourn was to a medieval abbey not far away. We purchased foie gras, cheeses, salami, artisan bread, and aged Burgundy to wash it all down. Somehow we managed to stash our victuals in the narrow boot of our 30s Delahaye roadster, leaving just enough space for a vintage serving table. Folded, it occupies the smallest of spaces.

Gently worn, patina'd leather. Honey finished solid wood assembly frame. Originally designed by London Army & Navy purveyors for Imperial Army officers on the move. Legs and frame rolled up inside the canvas seat, or if luxury was called for, leather. Then in the 1920s taken by European settlers of the Argentina pampas, it became the gaucho's stock of trade. Aged ones now populate living rooms of haciendas in Argentina and Uruguay. Designed to function on uneven footing, their flexibility surprises. Guess being on a horse all day made gauchos appreciate the gentle movement of this truly magical chair with a macho provenance.

Dispatched for victuals for the captain's table or to take the crew on shore leave... Gigs were invaluable when in port or moored outside. Referred to as rowboats by land-bound folk, a gig was easy to lower overboard, handled by one sailor, and quick to dispatch. When stowed, it nested inside the long boat secured on the main hatch. Our lapstrake (overlapping strips of wood) gigs are not seaworthy, but they certainly look like it! Clinker-built, they add flair and atmosphere to any room. Shelves turn them into fun displays and bookcases.

Produced for Imperial armies on campaign. Officers of the British Raj and French officers sent to the African dominions needed furniture that was nearly indestructible. Brass bound and constructed of durable wood, they were built to survive while on the move, and consequently survive generations.

Functional, classic, and never out of fashion. Known and beloved by a small circle of connoisseurs. Desks, chairs, trunks, bars, armoires, tables... Some with secret spaces to keep bullion, XO brandy and love letters away from inquisitive eyes.

Inspired by these 19th C. originals, our furniture is adapted for the modern age. Glass tops, drawer dimensions... each practical feature has been recreated. After all, our clients are probably not traveling by camel caravan across the Gobi Desert. But surely they will be duly impressed by the quality and durability of our campaign style.

Captain's Desk, Black

Captains made good use of notoriously cramped quarters in the ship's stern section (deckhands were housed before the mast). The captain's desk was tailor made to offer maximum comfort and space using minimal floor area. Drawers to house the crew's papers, sealed sailing instructions, logbooks, charts, instruments and a pair of flintlock pistols. Brass corners to protect from damage when being moved around. Sturdy construction to withstand violent ship movement. Well-traveled, ageless and indestructible.

MF145 On-the-Go Desk

Tripod-on-the-go for Officers and Gentlemen. Cowhide strap holds legs together while doubling as shoulder strap. Canvas seat with leather rims. Campaign carry-ons are as practical some 150 years ago as today. Take it to the races, an outdoor concert, quail-hunt!

MF152 Tripod-on-the-Go #1

Designed to be folded up, packed away, carried on the march. British upper class came to dominate the colonial imperial army in the 19th C. Used to quality furniture designers such as Chippendale and Sheraton developed stylish pieces easy to transport. Our tripod served the need for impromptu hunting big-game, dining chair while on-the-go, and the general needs of genteel life abroad, especially India, Africa and the South Seas.

MF146 Coffee Table/Bench
M. 98 x 43 x 45.5cm, 38.5 x 17x 18"

With the portability of traditional campaign furniture, the leaning Desk makes a clever occasional-use desk. Lean it closed against a wall, at-the-ready for a spontaneous writing session, small work project, or laptop. Prop it next to a child's bed for an impromptu homework station. The writing surface easily slides down next to table legs for compact storage. Its narrow profile is perfect for students or anyone in limited quarters. Its utilitarian design may prove equally appealing as an indispensable, permanent fixture for any living space.

This multi-purpose piece is large enough to include a sizable storage nook for stashing the inevitable clutter. A drawer and a large tray are easily accessed by pulling out from either front or back sides. Position it in the entryway as a reception bench and convenient holding space for cast-off schoolbooks, purses, and possibly even shoes... Or place by the living room couch, where cups, coasters, and reading material can reside near at hand. Let the coffee klatch begin!

Classic campaign desk made purposely for travel. The lower unit, holding three large drawers, ships separately from the top, holding the more active work area. The desktop slides out, revealing a red lacquered document box hidden beneath an innocuous honey finished shelf. Space for years of private letters, Swiss bank statements, and forged passports... If this box could only talk! Check out the lustrous French finish, heavy bronze handles, and intricate joinery. Utterly composed and practical, offering maximum space on a minimum footprint.

Architects were once skilled draftsmen and graceful calligraphers, able to draw a crisp and perfect line on virgin drafting stock. They worked at a classic architect's desk crafted of precious woods, with an adjustable top tilted at an individualized angle. Usually they would stand, lounge, and lean on the tall desk, discarding the chair or replacing it with a tall, narrow stool. Coming in two heights, our unusual and attractive architect desk is designed with many practical features, including extended side flaps, vertical folder slots, and subtle, yet highly functional drawers.

US yachtsmen (the Morgans, Vanderbilts, Roosevelts...) visiting the Royal Yacht clubhouse at Cowes, England, were surprised at the lack of locker rooms, showers and docks. Even a bar was absent. In contrast the cabins and staterooms of the visiting American yachts were resplendent with grandeur. Fine interior upholstery and cabinetwork were de rigueur. Visitors and club members danced by night on polished teak decks, sleeping between silk in beautifully appointed cabins, enjoying fireworks and fine cuisine. At some point we realized our furniture collection was turning into a labor of love. Originally devised as a home for our Kunstkammer objets d'art, we somehow turned a corner in celebrating the nostalgia of a past sailing era, colonial trade, and now... beach life and style. We strive to make the practical exude romance and the historical to include a touch of contemporary. With their air of beach-view porches and sun-filled mooring docks our beach lockers and consoles celebrate Nantucket as well as Deauville. Making efficient use of every inch and centimeter, they hold towels and sailor's scarves, polo gear and golfing shoes. Air circulates ingeniously, banning odors and keeping things dry with fragrant freshness. Fold-out shelves hold shaving gear or jewelry, prop up mirrors and in general offer much appreciated workspace. A veritable balancing act of the exotic and matter-of-fact!

MODULAR CAMPAIGN SYSTEM

Major General Gordon of the British Imperial Army won his laurels in China but became famous during the Battle of Khartoum in 1885 when he heroically defended the city against rebellious armies. General Gordon never travelled without a host of mahogany campaign furniture, custom made by the venerable Army & Navy Stores in Victoria Street, London. The general's idea to stack campaign style boxes into wall cabinets holding his books, booze and sundries, developed over time into our modular campaign system.

From a Destroyer's bridge to Luxury Hotel suite.

Our collection of replica ship's lights have found their way to private villas, boutique windows, luxury homes and hotels, accessorizing ultra modern reception desks. It's easy to see why. Large, impressive and at the same time functional. Very visible. From Copacabana to Istanbul and from Paris to Tokyo, our lights have often found a place in extravagant surroundings.

• THEN I PROCEED TO INVENT •

Thomas Edison

Right from the bridge of a 1940s Navy destroyer... heavy cast bronze and aluminum, it must be nautical. Is part of its appeal that it's just engineered, not designed? Form follows function...balanced on a surveyor's tripod. Looking like a million dollars, it smells of salt and sea while managing to convey cool and modern. It's salvage, vintage salvage. And it translates into sophisticated home décor.

Marconi Spotlight II

Our spotlight dates back to the 1930s and was likely used on a French Navy battleship. By moving slatted louvers the signalman sent short and longer spaced beams of light that could be read by trained sailors in the distance. Morse code combines long and short pulses to convey a message. Created in the 1840s Morse code was in use for more than a century and a half. The S.O.S. sent by ships in distress (as on the Titanic) was sent in Morse code.

As always searching for that lucky find, the original of this 30s spotlight was unearthed in an antique store in Greenwich, England. In a way the light is a wonderful combination of old technology, romantic seafaring and practical lighting. Perched on its imposing rosewood tripod the light dominates, adding character to a room, an important element in today's design philosophy. Our replica is exclusive to AM, hand-crafted of brass and aluminum. This is signature AM for those who value master craftsmanship and technical skills. - ◆ ceiling bracket in brass included
- ◆ made to withstand generations of use
- ◆ industrial dome-glass surrounded by cast aluminum grate

The many subtle details of this classic 1920s French lamp easily impress. Yet in construction nothing is done easily. Every facet is well executed and perfect. An intriguing, solid counterweight balances the compact, bell-like shade. A mix of Bauhaus and French Deco! Invoking the spirit of Baudelaire and Proust...

Piercing the dark. Fronting a mile-long curved and polished hood. Nestled between sculpted wheel fenders while framing a huge chrome radiator featuring a bronze Art Deco finial... A combination of polished aluminum and brass brings home 1920s style, perfection and craftsmanship. Check out its details, its imposing size, and the tall ebonized tripod complete with a travel compass dating back to the Mille-Miglia of the 1920s!

An early British Navy light from the period between WWI and WWI. What we loved most was all the details, like the two handles to point and turn the light beam. On board of a 1920's battle cruiser or navy destroyer it would have been mounted on the bridge. Signal lamps were managed by trained signal men, skilled in transmitting morse code. This was obviously way before the age of the internet... In the period before and during the second World War all factories were modified to the manufacture of war material. Brass and Copper was collected from all available sources and turned into usable war contraptions of the highest possible quality. Enjoy this replica of an old signal lamp, by now dating back close to a century, with all it's 'form follows function' and somewhat idiosyncratic details...

When a friend of mine decided to move to Berwick-on-Tweed to start a B&B in a 13th C. bastion (with walls 10 feet thick and 22 feet high) he was confronted with the problem of how to flood the walls with the right kind of light. Being a smart and enterprising person, a Navy stock lot of 1930s Half Mile Ray lamps was located. Originally constructed to last a lifetime, he rigged them in series, and to the best of my knowledge they are still working. Our faithful reproduction is mounted on a maple tripod, its angle adjustable with a clever piece of 1930s technology. The overall look is cool, contemporary, and at the same time historically correct.

A fifties era industrial looking spotlight that could have lighted the stage of the famous Folies Bergères. Form follows function in this entirely practical light that condenses and magnifies a fierce beam towards the stage. Or in our case, more probably a painting or an easy chair. Handcrafted in airplane aluminum. Hand polished. Easy to adjust and point. Folding aluminum tripod. In the end it's all in the detail.

The Golden Age of Travel

Things most beautiful and rare are those that remain true over time, things that endure. They feel authentic and honest. Many of us seek this quality. In our travels. In the things we covet.

We love the steamers, trains and hotels of the early 1900s. Transatlantic steamers were fast moving, floating luxury hotels. Trains of that period were vastly more luxurious and pleasant than modern trains. Privacy and service were de rigueur...

AM Ship Models

- ◆ Completely handmade by skilled craftsmen.
- ◆ Highest quality parts: hand-sewn fabric sails with detailed stitching, solid brass antiqued hardware made from individual molds.
- ◆ Most models are built plank-on-frame, some have a solid carved hull.
- ◆ Most models ship ready to rig. Detailed instructions explain easy assembly upon arrival.
- ◆ All models come with table stands.
- ◆ Plans and drawings are researched in the archives of museums and national libraries. Our scale models are true miniature representations of the originals.
- ◆ People love to admire the intricate details of the hulls, decks, rigging, and sails of our models. Scale models adorn the Oval Office at the White House, Wall Street offices, and private libraries.
- ◆ Our impeccable quality and attention to detail has earned AM the reputation as a world leader in sailing ship model reproductions.

{ half hull models }

During the 19th century, shipwrights created exact scale half hull models, a construction plan for a ship's hull design and its particular curvature "sheer". These were mounted and displayed in admiralty and shipping offices, and now sell at auction as decorative nautical art.

Opulent First Class, its extraordinary luxury representing an era when time was more leisurely enjoyed. Our high-end, desktop Titanic model is hand built by skilled craftsmen. Incomparable quality. Packaging extensively tested against shipping damage.

The Age of Sail made voyages of exploration possible. The invention of the simple compass freed sailors from coastal courses, opening the wider world to trade, travel and cultural exchange. Model ships were crafted as a votive for the local chapel or as shipyard models to impress the Admiralty lords. Our captivating collection of oceanliners, sailing ships and runabouts, nautical artifacts, instruments and accessories continue to fascinate and intrigue.

Colorful folk art boat models evoke an era of more leisurely travel, when passengers, mail, and freight were often conveyed between exotic, far-flung ports of call by tramp steamer and paquebot. Freighter travel was perfect for those seeking the privacy inherent in a short passenger list. For many shipping lines, filling up cabin space was as important as filling the cargo hold. Amenities ranged all the way up to first class staterooms, with luxurious common rooms and dining halls where elaborate cuisine was shared at table with the ship's officers. This was the mode of travel favored by writers, and anyone who sought to escape from the busyness of life and savor the solitude afforded by life at sea. Conversation and a good book passed the time. Adventure and romance called from nearby shores.

Through centuries of technological innovation, we've charted the whole world. But early navigators and explorers setting out didn't necessarily know where they were headed. Guided only by a simple compass, the stars of the night sky, early octants and astrolabes. Possibly terrifying, but also exciting... Discover early navigation, enjoy an unbelievable collection of compasses from various eras.

A needle pointing north. Antique science captured in admiralty brass. Allowing sailors to cross vast oceans, explorers to discover continents. Set sail for the fabled Spice Islands, legendary Cathay... rumored South Lands. An instrument of exploration that changed the world of Renaissance, forever...

Victorian engineers loved to tinker with design, and make things look interesting and especially larger than life. A pocket watch transformed into a desk watch, convex optical glass magnifiers showing an enlarged dial and hands.

Not exactly a travel watch this, more desk bound, an object that delights with its translation of form. Turning into a gem under soft lamp light, it doesn't easily get lost while always telling time.

Over the centuries the utilitarian walking stick transformed into an elegant accessory essential to a gentleman's de-rigueur fashion-statement. Its design, shape and material conveyed one's taste and status. Some sticks hid a long, thin rapier inside, convenient for defense and dueling. Others held flasks or compasses. The most popular, no doubt, had a wind-up watch set in the knob. Our re-creation of this Victorian walking stick is both a decorative prop and practical timekeeper.

Ø 5 x 98cm, 2 x 38.5"
- 9 WS002 Captain's Walking Stick
Ø 3.5 x 92cm, 1.5 x 36.25"

The gentlemen's walking stick. The brass knob hides a compass, the cane a glass for a tippel. Cotton bag included.

For over 300 years, the many navies of the world served daily rum rations. The rum barrel was rolled out each day to the scuttlebutt near the main hatch. Under armed guard, and using the standard size cup, the Ship's Purser served sailors from one to six 'tots' of rum (1/4 Gill each). Handmade in copper and brass, silver-plated inside.

1 KA036 Officer's Spyglass
 M. 38.75 x 4.25cm, 15.25 x 1.75"

An intriguing and classic explorer's and navigator's tool. Essential instruments – A compass, a sextant and a telescope. The telescope consists of a wood barrel holding an objective, a system of lenses. It is protected by brass collars and a decorative brass cap. To use, pull out the brass tubes (called drawers in Britain). The smallest tube holds the eye objective. Judiciously push in the smallest end-tube to focus.

2 KA023 Bronze Spyglass
 M. 46 x 5.5cm, 18 x 2.25"

Made to store away as small as possible, this is a marvel of hand tooled telescoping brass tubes. Pull out all the way and focus by adjusting the smallest eye-section. Feel like a sea captain scanning the horizon from a heaving aft-deck. Leather covered. Bronze finished. Cotton bag included.

Classic campaign glasses used by Victorian gentry and Army & Navy to observe while taking notes and sketching. Sturdy 19th C. binoculars on elegant, beautifully crafted mini-tripod. Binoculars were a Victorian invention and were much easier to use than the three-barrel drawn out telescope.

6 KA039 Monocular on Tripod
 Ø 96 x 170cm, 37.75 x 67"

Dating back to the pitching bridge of a dreadnought man-of-war or the battlements of the British Imperial Army campaign headquarters. Far-reach telescopes were rare and expensive, available only to captains of the fleet and highly ranked officers of the general staff. Our monocular is outfitted with complicated prismatic lenses. Its brass and nickel parts are expertly covered with hand-sewn leather, to withstand the wear and tear of daily use on campaign.

Sailing ships were on a 24-hour schedule. A crew divided in three groups worked four-hour shifts, with a couple of two-hour dog-watches in between to break the schedule. Only in extreme conditions when 'all hands' were called on deck, was it four hours on, eight hours off. A 30-minute hourglass placed next to the helmsman was turned each time the sand ran through. At the same time he rang the ships bell. One bell for the first glass, two for the second, up to eight for the last half hour of the watch, the signal for a new shift to begin. A half hour on board was called 'Glass'.

The function of the hourglass before the introduction of the chronometer was to keep track of time, essential for calculating longitude. Sailing from Cape Town east to Australia you really didn't want to end up on the infamous reefs out there. Finding latitude was done with sextants and tables. To define longitude, as parallel to the equator, time had to be measured properly.

This handsome, classic hourglass once ruled the schedule on a French Admiral's command vessel. A wonderful gift, an accessory with an interesting history.

The mirror has traditionally vacillated between the ornamental and practical. Huge and over decorated wall mirrors have been de rigueur for centuries. Strangely enough, it's hard to find a modest, practical, table mirror made with both ease of use and aesthetics in mind. A synthesis of form + function, our mirror stands on a base replicating part of a Georgian scientific instrument. The mirror telescopes up and down. It angles by adjusting a clever ball-joint. Large, slightly magnifying front, smaller flat mirror back. Sleek and classy.

A Short History of Desktop Travel

Check the bags. Your boarding pass includes a hand filled out folder containing a list of names of all the passengers. Just so you're already half acquainted. This is travel in the 1930s when after passport check you just strolled across the tarmac to the plane. Then your seat was a rattan deck chair; soft luxury chairs came later.

You made fuel stops in Rome, Athens, Baghdad, Karachi, Jodhpur, Rangoon and Singapore before moving on to Kupang, Darwin and Melbourne. You can't imagine a more exciting and hands-on mode of travel, while being served smoked sturgeon, caviar and Veuve Clicquot!

The P-51 Mustang was the first US built fighter in action after the fall of France, successfully engaging every air-born opponent from early Junkers to the Messerschmitt. Fast, powerful, and maneuverable, with 75-gallon tanks under each wing, its ability to fly 6-hour missions was unheard of at the time. In 1944 the Truman Senate War Investigating Committee gave the Mustang its highest rating as "the most aerodynamically perfect pursuit plane in existence."

TORNADO

More than forty years after its first flight in 1974, the Tornado remains one of the leading military aircraft in Western Europe. The Tornado is a family of twin-engine, variable-sweep wing combat aircraft jointly developed by Italy, the United Kingdom, and West Germany.

Introduced to service in 1979-1980, the versatile Tornado replaced fleets of aircraft in tactical strike, reconnaissance, and naval defense roles. Its design allows wing angle deflection during flight from 25° to 67°, critical alteration during high-speed, low-altitude maneuvers, and to high-speed, low-altitude landings, using its short runway takeoffs and landings, using thrust reverser-equipped engines for deceleration.

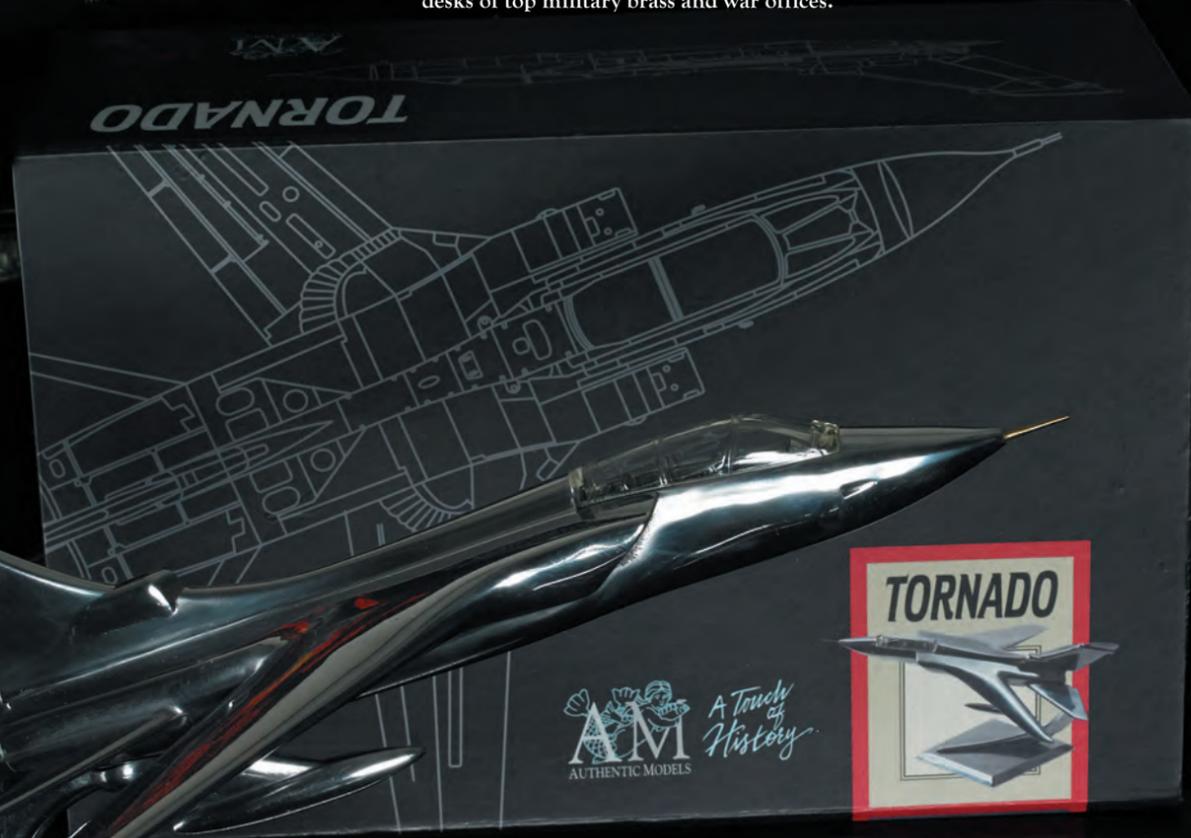

The Tornado served the Royal Air Force, Italian Air Force and RSAF during the 1991 Gulf War, and various operations during the Bosnian and Kosovo Wars, Iraq War, Libyan civil war, and in Afghanistan and Yemen. Including all variants, 992 have been built.

Our desk model is a detailed replica of original factory supplied models gracing the desks of top military brass and war offices.

Fastest Speed Recorded? Two traffic officers in Scotland were shocked when their radar gun recorded a speed of over 300mph for an approaching vehicle. The device promptly stopped working and couldn't be reset. Little did they realize they nearly caused a major security incident! Suspecting that they could have locked onto a nearby fighter jet, the Chief Constable complained to military officials. Their response: a Tornado in low-level flight over the North Sea had located 'hostile radar equipment' and had sent a jamming signal back before its onboard missiles automatically locked onto the target. Fortunately, an attentive pilot overrode the automatic response system before missile launch!

Today, more than forty years after its first flight, the versatile Tornado remains one of the leading military aircraft in Western Europe. Its variable wing angle and its thrust reverser-equipped engines, allow the Tornado to excel in high-speed, low-altitude maneuvers, and short runway takeoffs and landings. Our Tornado is a detailed replica of original factory supplied models gracing the desks of top military brass and war offices.

THINGS to COVET

To be honest, we like the idiosyncratic, focused but at the same time a bit unpredictable. Our credo is, in a nutshell... we don't want you to be bored. So from the far corners of the world we're collecting artifacts and art, looking for sources of whimsy and history. Architectural models, once made by future cabinet-masters for their final exam. Maps, bisque porcelain, classic busts, and more. An eclectic mix to fill the shelves of our curio cabinet.

Michelangelo had several models made of the St. Peter dome during the time he worked on it. Discovered in an attic and newly restored, these models are now a main attraction at the Vatican Museum. Architects over the centuries have made models to check details in 3D and help clients understand dimensional perspectives. Many architects of renown also collected models, not only for their exquisite workmanship but also for their value as décor in homes and especially offices.

AM offers a small but no less fascinating collection of early stair models and dome buildings. Cherry and birch wood finished in subtle shades of light and dark honey. Sinuous curves and arches in beautifully finished wood add a fluid touch to private or corporate quarters.

Covet. Cherish. Like Renaissance princes filling a Cabinet of Curiosities, live a fantasy collecting objects of imagination. From intricate wood models inspired by Michelangelo and Da Vinci, classic games and writing sets, vintage model racecars, iconic rocking horses to mesmerizing storybook skyhooks. The breadth of our museum collection truly amazes. Great as décor, unique as gifts.

AR039 Icosahedron
M. 23.5 x 23.5cm, 9.25 x 9.25"

In 1509 Luca Pacioli published this legendary book. Its illustrator, Leonardo da Vinci, devised a method to portray the five Platonic shapes in 3-D perspective, shaded like real objects, rather than geometrical diagrams. From Plato's time these forms had special significance to mathematicians and philosophers alike, representing symbols for earth and fire, water and air.

The juxtaposition of science and art intrigued Renaissance intelligentsia. Wooden models commissioned at Milanese and Florentine courts became actual symbols of learning and sophistication. Besides their metaphysical and geometric importance, the Da Vinci polyhedral shapes are quintessential building blocks of matter.

Victorian Rocking Horse

Our iconic mahogany Rocking Horse is a full-sized version of the classic British Victorian playroom original. We researched original sources and found blueprints that served our woodcarvers and specialists to create what we think is the most beautiful and valuable horse currently marketed. Our saddles are handmade of real leather; tack is handstitched durable bridle leather. The various wood parts are selected for color and grain, and proper match. The whole is French finished and slightly distressed. This horse will survive centuries when treated with love and care!

One of the greatest classic theatre tragedies from English history is that of the Duke and Duchess of Malfi, the story of a beautiful Duchess who absconds with a common lover, leaving the Palace of Pleasures. This famous story also appealed to masked participants of the yearly Venetian Commedia dell'Arte season, which lasted for months... Our sculptured masks represent an age when elegance and sophistication mixed with a need for secrecy and pretense. The 'Bouffon' or Jester is an unusually rich and decorative representation of one of the most ubiquitous of Venetian Carnival characters.

Roman Sculpted Torsos
 Classic Roman villas featured marble sculptures and statues in their gardens and loggias. Many of these were copies of ancient Greek originals, which focused on the youthful perfection of the male or female body. This set of figures represents the best of ancient classical sculpture. Handmade from a mixture of resin and plaster of Paris, they are expertly aged and finished to a high degree.

High quality mixed plaster and resin sculptures from Roman antiquity to the Renaissance. Museum quality decor at competitive pricing.

One of the more popular casino games of our age, Roulette was in widespread use in the 18th C. in Europe and America. Being occasionally outlawed, a portable roulette was invented, which was popular with officers of the Imperial Army and taken on campaign. Simplified with less numbers, it still allows for fun gambling. A sophisticated travel version of the elaborate Monte Carlo table on mounted wheels, it dates back to the Victorian era, made to order for the Army & Navy stores.

Headed up by the Boston Lighthouse Shaker, our Speakeasy Specials all feature surprising and unusual shapes. Decorative designs that differed from the classic shaker shape were in fashion, to make them less easily recognized by the police. All this was during the 1920s, when the Congress voted in the Prohibition and the US went 'dry'. Illegal bars called speakeasies came in many varieties. All shakers are made of heavily silver-plated brass and are food safety approved.

The 1930s saw the rise of hand built model racecars, known as spindizzies or tether cars. Miniature racecars built by hobbyists zoomed around banked wooden tracks at speeds approaching 150 miles per hour. Resembling the full-size racers of their day, several spindizzies competed at once, tethered by cables to a central pole. Powered by model airplane engines, spindizzies raced against the clock. Incredibly detailed and aerodynamic, these miniature racecars were beyond toys; they were pieces of art representative of the best pioneering technology of the era. Constructed using original blueprints our Bantam Midget model resembles the original down to the smallest detail. One look and you'll be ready to join the competition.

Called tether cars or spindizzies, they reached incredible speeds, and inspired thousands to improve and invent. The founder of the B.B. Korn Manufacturing Company, Barney Korn, produced several tether car models that now, as vintage antiques, achieve astounding sums at auction.

Four Centuries of Travel Treasures

See the world through the eyes of explorers and navigators centuries ago. Walk the streets of Rome or Paris in the 17th and 18th centuries. Our globes and maps offer visual history, make adventure and exploration real. Encompassing some of the best feats of cartography, AM strives to offer high quality replicas that combine distinct historical provenance with a contemporary interest in unique and interesting décor.

Saint Augustine

No Renaissance library, reception room, or merchant's office was complete without a large globe on a stand. Mapmakers and globe publishers issued new globes every year, keeping clients up to date on the latest discoveries and explorations. New trade routes, new ports of call... even new continents! Our 32 cm (12.5") globe with floor stand is the classical form used over the centuries.

- ♦ original centuries old maps sourced from European National Libraries
- ♦ solid bronze, engraved meridian ring
- ♦ hand-applied, exact map reproductions, 12 sections make one whole
- ♦ papier-mâché sphere finished in plaster of Paris
- ♦ classic Vaugondy French globe
- ♦ a rich, classic wood floor stand is French finished
- ♦ stand disassembles into two pieces for easy shipping

GL047 Library Globe
M. 48 x 48 x 96cm, 19 x 19 x 37.75"

AM is the renown leader in antique globes. No other company in the world offers authentic reproductions of similar quality and affordability.

Attention to detail is key. AM replicates the complicated 'gravure' printing process, resulting in the sharpest lines, words, and symbols even on the smallest size globe. Centuries ago globes were made by gluing copperplate printed gores on a plaster finished papier-mâché core. This application method continues at AM. All AM globes are made using original charts, researched by AM for their historical accuracy and visual appeal.

Our globes offer history at your fingertips and highlight some of the world's most famous cartographers: Mercator, Hondius, and Vaugondy.

Atlas was one of the legendary Titans battling Zeus. After his defeat Atlas was sentenced to carry the Earth on his mighty shoulders till the end of time... The Atlas of our armillary dial is carrying the entire universe. That's to say the known Renaissance universe. The Earth was believed to be at its center. Gracefully intertwined silver rings represent trajectories of heavenly bodies around the Earth. In all aspects ethereal, myth combined with science, fable with historic fact.

A simple, ingenious stand combined with our historic globe spheres makes for an elegant display. Set upright vertically to display spheres.

Five globes from five centuries, symbolizing the advancement of cartography, the gradual pushing back of boundaries. Seemingly a magic object, many earth globes moving in perpetual circles. Different style globes in colors, hues and specifications make a fascinating and elegant object. Sure to arouse interest in planets and their clockwork movements in a curious child's mind, it may at the same time bring about sleep in a drowsy mind, watching its hypnotic pattern. For the waking mind, a fascinating exercise awaits...

GL060 Globe Mobile
M. 108 x 18 x 90cm,
42.5 x 7 x 35.5"

Three wooden planes, all gracefully glide around our 1920s globe. All hand applied gores. Easy assembly.

AP124 Around the World Mobile
M. 34.5 x 66 x 40cm, 13.5 x 26 x 15.75"

- ◆ unique 3D representation of the solar system
- ◆ represents eight planets of the solar system plus Pluto
- ◆ hand applied gores
- ◆ colors as viewed by space satellites from earth
- ◆ both decorative and educative for playrooms and kid's bedrooms

GL061 Solar System Mobile
M. 51 x 135 x 45cm, 20 x 53.25 x 17.75"

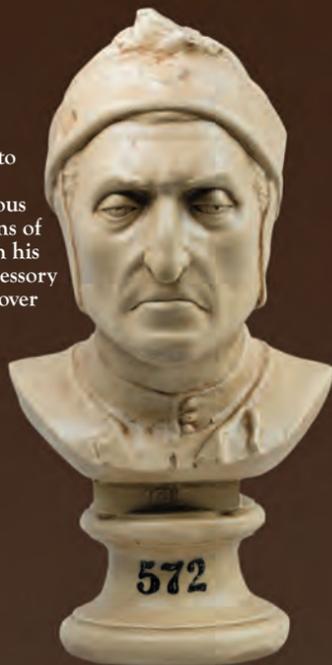

Gazing in the night sky we wonder about the size and scope of the universe. Within that magnitude our solar system seems infinite and overwhelming. It's easier to understand native creation myths, Newtonian and Galilean theories, and great historical discoveries when viewing the solar system on a smaller, more comprehensible human scale. Reduced to both scientific and decorative models of our planetary system, revolving around the sun and not the earth as early scientists believed, this mobile will fascinate the young in age and youthful in heart.
